What were the Fund's costs for the last year?

(based on a hypothetical $10,000 investment)

Class Name	Costs of a $10,000 investment	Costs paid as a percentage of a $10,000 investment
Institutional Class	$299	3.16%

How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

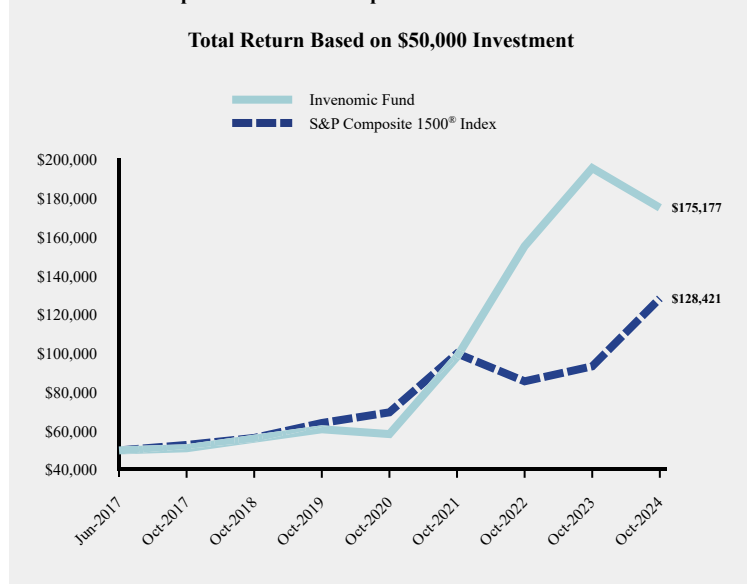

The long portfolio contributed 28.77% while the short portfolio detracted approximately -40.54%, both on a gross basis. During this period, we averaged 109.93% long and -92.39% short resulting in average net exposure of 17.54% and average gross exposure 202.32%.

From a sector perspective, our biggest contributors on the long side were Information Industrials (+6.30%), Financials (+6.17%) and Consumer Discretionary (+5.10%). On the short side, the sectors that detracted the most were Information Technology (-13.22%), Consumer Discretionary (-8.20%) and Financials (-8.09%). From a total portfolio perspective, the top ten contributed 9.79% and the top ten detractors cost -10.62%, both on a gross basis.

Our strategy faced two substantial market headwinds during the year which negatively impacted performance. The first is underperformance of value relative to growth. The Russell 1000 Value/Growth Index was down -10.57% during the period, which is the fifth worst year in the last 25 years. The second and most substantial headwind was the momentum factor which as of October 31, 2024, had its second strongest year in the last 25 years as measured by the Bloomberg US Pure Momentum Factor Index. Considering the strength of the headwinds we faced, we believe we managed risk as well as can be expected. We feel like our portfolio is well positioned for what is likely to be a volatile period going forward.

We expect the market environment to remain volatile for the foreseeable future. The outcome of the U.S. election will create opportunities on the long and the short side regardless of who is elected. Equity valuations remain at extremely elevated levels, and as a result, we will continue to proceed cautiously relying on our investment process, which has served us well over time.
